

McKinseys' Offices in Lisbon

Lisbon, Portugal

Modern and comfortable working spaces: an architectural and design project of great taste that we were proud to supply.

The mixture between Beige Travertine and Travertino Noce is a constant and the result of this material combination is extraordinary. Both on their polished finish and in 90*45*3cm pieces, a very elegant dimension that goes with the natural veining of the travertines, the materials are used on the paving of the common areas of the building.

The curved staircase, in Beige Travertine, was previously executed in platex molds and then fabricated in natural stone with the excellence mark of our team.

For the entrance of the McKinsey's offices, the choice was for Red Travertine simply sawn. An unusual finish with a classy outcome: a stupendous wall and attendance balcony.
